Keep up with the latest daily buzz with the BuzzFeed Daily newsletter! Media Platforms Design TeamHot women are hot in almost any context: dressed to the nines on the red carpet, lounging around in sweats, or—our favorite option—wearing nothing at all. Now Allison Williams is putting that theory to the test. Today it was announced that the gorgeous Girls castmember—and, oh yeah, daughter of news anchor Brian Williams—will be slicking back her hair, slipping into a green leotard, and wearing a feather cap as Peter Pan. She'll star opposite Christopher Walken in NBC's upcoming live telecast of the 1954 Broadway musical. That's right. Our favorite Girl is playing a little flying boy. Will we still be attracted to Williams as a 10-year-old tyke? Yeah, probably. After all, we named her one of The Hottest Women of 2014, so we can't back down now. And besides her obvious beauty, she's funny as hell as the misguided Marnie on Girls, and has the vocal chops to pull off the musical's tricky score. So you can bet we'll be tuning into NBC's production on December 4. . . . even if it'll feel a little weird ogling Peter Pan. Andrew Daniels is the Senior Editor for Popular Mechanics. He lives in Allentown, Pennsylvania with his wife and dog, Draper. Watch Next This was my project for my first daughter, 3 years ago. Its a Victorian style nursery of Wendy darling, from Peter Pan. Besides some fancy trim and painting stripes on the walls, the main attraction is the "window" that looks out over the streets of London at night. The mural is the same that appears at Peter Pans Flight in Disneyland. I took a photo of the mural into a graphics program, redrew it as basic shapes, then printed it out on a transparency for overhead projectors, which I borrowed from my teacher sister. Projecting it on the wall, I traced out the shapes with pencil. I masked off around it, and began painting. I used acrylic paints from the local craft . . . brushed almost all, except for some light airbrushing of the sky, with a very cheap airbrush. Pans shadow was done the same way, drawn in the computer, printed it full size onto several sheets of photo paper, then cut out the shape with a razor with a glazing compound and drop of black and pink paint (Shadows have a purple hint to them) I used a paint roller with very little paint on it, and rooled over it. Worked perfect! Enjoy! The ride vehicles in Peter Pan's Flight are suspended from above, giving a feeling of flying. The ride vehicles take you into Wendy's bedroom. Peter Pan says: "Come on, everybody! Here we go!" and the ship flies out the nursery window and over moonlit London and to Never Land, where of course you will encounter Captain Hook, Mr. Smee, and that annoying crocodile. This older style ride holds up well against more modern ones, and it remains very popular. 01 of 03 Loren Javier/Flickr/CC BY-ND 2.0 Location: Peter Pan is in Fantasyland. Rating: ★★★★★ Restrictions: No height restrictions. Children under age 7 years must be accompanied by a person age 14 years or older. Ride Time: 2 minutes Recommended for: It seems like it's a ride for small children, but just about everyone loves it Fun Factor: Medium. Peter Pan is one of the best rides at Disneyland. Wait Factor: High. See notes and strategies below. Fear Factor: Low Herky-Jerky Factor: Low Nausea Factor: Low Seating: Ride vehicles look like sailing ships. Each one has a single row with a bench seat that can hold a family of four, but it will be tight if you try to put three adults and a child in that same space. You step straight in. Accessibility: You have to transfer into the ride vehicle, either by yourself or with help from your companions. Wheelchairs enter through the exit. You may have to park your ECV outside if it can't negotiate the narrow aisle. Peter Pan is one of the most popular rides in Fantasyland with long lines most of the time, and it does not have a FASTPASS option. To make matters worse, rides in Fantasyland close early when there is a fireworks display. These are a few ways to cut your time in line: Go to Disneyland on a day when early entry is not offered. You can find those days on their calendar about a month out. Arrive at the gate 30 to 45 minutes before opening time and hope that it's a day when they let guests into Main Street before the official opening time. Once inside the park, go to the hub near the Walt and Mickey friends statue and wait for official opening time. As soon as you can get in, go straight through the castle and get in line. If you have a ticket for early entry, the best way to use it is head to Peter Pan first before the lines build up. I like Ridemax for minimizing wait times on busy days. Their customized itinerary will take you to Peter Pan when the lines are shortest. You can also use the free Mouse Wait app and keep checking to see when lines are somewhat shorter. Other strategies include getting in line during a parade or a performance of Fantasmic! You can also try getting in line just minutes before the park closes. Even though the wait might still be long, they will let you stay until you ride and the waiting won't take away from other things to do. The ride vehicles hold only two people (three if the third is a very small child) - use your time in line to figure out who's sitting together. When you get on, put the kids in first and the adult on the outside. It's a little safer that way. On days when the fireworks show is running, this ride closes early. Continue to 3 of 3 below. 03 of 03 Peter Pan's Flight is one of the original Disneyland attractions that were in the park on opening day in 1955. This ride uses almost 200 miles of fiber optics. It's similar to the Peter Pan ride in Florida, but with a few differences.
